

SELF-ASSURANCE®

I am confident in my judgment and abilities, with a solid sense of self-direction and the ability to act authoritatively.

Academic Life

- Consider studying abroad to expand your experience.
- Take classes that are challenging, wherein your passion will fuel your success.
- Seek coursework that values independent study with minimal direction.

Career Goals

- Seek newer companies wherein you can make the rules, instead of following pre-existing procedures.
- The entrepreneurial path will give you the freedom to be your own boss.
- Work environments that allow independence will avoid your distaste for micromanagement.

Decision Making

- You don't second-guess yourself, and this leads to stubbornness. Look to others to provide feedback for your decisions.
- The certainty you feel is sometimes hard to articulate, so look for others who can help you to express yourself.
- Set ambitious goals and commit to seeing them through.

Leadership Tips

- Let your self-confidence rub off on others and inspire them.
- You direct passion and hard work into your commitments, but exercise patience with those who don't have your same sense of drive.
- Take control of chaotic or uncertain situations and steer them back on track.

Relationship Building

- Your tendency towards independence requires that you make efforts to maintain relationships.
- Find a partner to assist you on projects.
- Strive to allow the people closest to you to be the captains of their own ships.

Extracurriculars

- Volunteer to lead a club or organization that needs to establish a direction.
- Choose a fun hobby that allows for independent improvement.
- Look for a way in which you can guide others and instill your same self-assurance into them.
