

COMMAND[®]

I am strong-willed and opinionated, with no aversions to confrontation, but instead, a conviction to be assertive and take charge.

Academic Life

- Ask probing questions during discussion and lecture as this helps you learn.
- Challenge what you learn and fight for the truth.
- Feel free to visit professors during office hours or communicate with your peers outside class to continue particularly interesting class discussions.

Career Goals

- Look for formal leadership roles and ask for feedback from others in the group.
- Explore areas that are focused on persuasiveness, such as sales, law, or theater.
- Look for careers that allow upward mobility, as you will rarely be intimidated by others.

Decision Making

- Your talent may have you wrestling for reigns of power which may lead to poor decision making. Remember: sometimes, it's fine to take a back seat.
- Find causes you believe in and support. Looking to the cause can help you make sound decisions.
- Remember to give yourself a chance to breath and do research. While you are always certain of your choice, it is better not to go in headstrong.

Leadership Tips

- Look for the right words to turn confrontation into persuasiveness.
- Your "take charge" attitude can be very reassuring. Convince stressed out peers that you have everything under control.
- Others will count on you to keep a project moving. You can create momentum by solving roadblocks.

Relationship Building

- Speak plainly and directly about sensitive subjects, as your honesty and constancy will be valued.
- Ask people for their opinions which can help limit your sometimes intimidating demeanor.
- Partner with someone who is strong in Empathy or Woo, as they can help you circumvent instead of confront.

Extracurriculars

- Look for activities that allow you to take charge and convince others of your plan.
- Groups that are expected to sell products or solicit donations allow your charisma to shine.
- Go for a higher up position in student government, as you do best when making decisions.
